TWO COUNCIL MEETINGS HELD

Financial Matters Occupy Much of The Time At Both Of The Sessions.

COMMITTEE SYSTEM CHANGED

Fox Creamery Was Promised Five Years' Exemption From City Taxes.

Two sessions of the Council were held last week. The first was a called session Thursday night in lieu of the joint committee meetings held under an ordinance passed in 1907, for which members drew pay. This meeting was occupied with committee matters, principally the auditing of claims. It was also decided to do away with the committee system of purchasing incidental supplies for the several departments through the department committees, provided by the same ordinance above referred to, and let the Purchasing Committee do buying for all departments.

Friday night the regular monthly meeting was held. The usual reports were received and filed and the monthly budget of accounts was allowed. Accounts will be passed upon by the Mayor and warrants drawn on the Tuesday following the meeting at which they are allowed.

The report of City Physician Perkins contained a recommendation that the little open court in the rear of the chief of police's office be made into a room for a lavatory and for operations. This was referred to a committee. He also suggested the need of a city pest house and recommended that the sewer traps removed in the business part of town be put back. An order to do this effect was made last year, but not carried out.

The Business Men's Committee on the creamery matter appeared before the Council consisting of S. L. Cowherd, M. L. Elb and W. L. Gore and outlined the request of the Peter Fox & Sons Co., for free water and sewerage and ten years' tax exemption for the proposed creamery.

The Council granted five years' exemption, all the law allows, and referred the other matters to a committee for investigation, a conference to be held with the water and sewerage companies and the Peter Fox & Sons Co.

Councilman Smith, of the Cemetery Committee, presented a new schedule of prices for lots in Cave Spring Colored Cemetery, grading from $30 in the front sections to $10 for those in the rear, the lots being approximately the same size. This was approved. The new rates are a slight advance on the front lots, the old price being 5 cents a foot for 400-foot lots.

The authority to issue emergency warrants on the orders of the committee chairmen, between council meetings, was held to be irregular and an appropriation of $200 was set aside for the Mayor to draw upon during March, using regular Council warrants. In addition to the reports made by the Treasurer, the Mayor will be required to report to the Council direct the warrants he draws with the purpose of each. As outlined in the proceedings of Thursday night's meeting, all purchasing power is to be placed in the hands of the Purchasing Committee, Councilmen Russell, Carliss and Southall. City Engineer McClaid attempted to explain the difficulty of applying to the head of a department and through him to the Purchasing Committee for articles needed in the street department, often for immediate use while the hands are waiting, but his remarks were ruled out of order and the new system adopted. It is probable that the ordinance creating the old system will be repealed and a

WILL EMPTY PENITENTIARY

Court of Appeals Defines When Prisoners Are Entitled To Freedom.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 9.—When a prisoner convicted under the indeterminate sentence law has served the minimum period of confinement and observed all the conditions precedent to making application for parole, the prison board must parole him, and if the board refuses he may secure a writ of mandamus, compelling them to grant it, said the Court of Appeals last week in affirming judgment of the Franklin Circuit Court granting a writ of mandamus to John DeMoss, of Covington, who was sentenced to the Reformatory here for from two to twenty-one years for manslaughter in 1910. The board refused his parole and he sued.

As the result of this decision hundreds of prisoners in the penitentiaries will be in a position to demand their paroles. It is said the General Assembly will make haste to amend the law.

John DeMoss, who won his suit to secure his release from the Reformatory at Frankfort under parole law, was charged with killing Louis Fillhardt, a saloon keeper, at Melbourne, Campbell county. DeMoss and Fillhardt had some trouble over the use of baseball grounds at Melbourne. DeMoss went to his home obtained a shotgun and killed Fillhardt. He rowed across the river and escaped. For several months he roamed about the country and was finally captured in the West.

TO MEET HERE.

Sunday School Association Invited to Hopkinsville.

Rev C. M. Thompson was given authority Wednesday night to invite the Western Kentucky Sunday School Association to hold its next meeting, April 6 and 7, with the First Baptist church. The body comprises one-third of the State and the number of delegates is expected to be at least 100. They will be entertained in private homes.

What Was The Purchase?

James Crowley has brought suit for $500 damages against the L & N. Railroad Co. The alleges that he was an employee of the company, riding on a pass and got off to "make a purchase" at this place and was not permitted to get back on the train. He says he was insulted and put to delay and expense in getting to Guthrie. He sues for $500 damages.

The contract with the Kentucky Public Service Co., authorized last fall, was presented and is now in effect. It provides for the blowing of a fire whistle, with no liability for a failure to blow it for any cause.

Gambill & Andrews were granted a saloon license, having bought the saloon of John Fortner.

A small street light was ordered at the corner of Thirteenth and Ferrell streets.

Adwell Bros. were given a contract for tin work at the Sexton's house, amounting to $30.42.

An ordinance ordering a concrete sidewalk on the south side of East Ninth street, at the city limits, was defeated. Ayes, Carliss, Southall and Gee. Noes, Buckner, Smith, Wooldridge and Russell.

Action on the creating of a Sinking Fund for Riverside Cemetery was deferred.

Mayor Yost discussed the necessity of a general cleaning up of the alleys of the city.

GRIM REAPER CLAIMS VICTIMS

Young and Old Alike Answer To The Last Summons.

Frank McGee, a young son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McGee, died Saturday at the home of his parents on the Newstead pike. He was taken ill at the home of his grandfather, J. M. Maddox, near Julien, two weeks ago and developed typhoid fever of the severest type. Everything possible was done, but without avail. He was the oldest of six brothers, and was 20 years of age. He was an unusually bright and promising young man, the pride of his dotting parents. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon by Rev. C. M. Thompson, of the First Baptist church, of which church Frank was a member. The burial was in the Maddox graveyard near Julien.

The young man was a nephew of County Assessor W. J. McGee and T. D. McGee of this city.

MRS. SHADOIN

Called to Her Reward After Long Illness.

Mrs. Permelia A. Shadoin died Friday night at her home on East Ninth street in the 72nd year of her age. She had long been an invalid. The immediate cause of her death was congestion of the lungs. Mrs. Shadoin was born Sept. 26, 1842, and nearly all of her life had been spent here. She leaves three sons and one daughter, Miss Ella Shadoin, a teacher in the city schools. Her sons are Robert, John and George Shadoin, all of this city. Samuel F. Bruff, a brother, also survives her. She was a member of the Christian Church. Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev H. D. Smith officiating.

Two At Hospital.

Frank Purgesson, a patient at the Western State Hospital from Ohio county, died Friday of tuberculosis, aged forty-six years. The body was shipped to Fordsville. Thos. Smith, a patient from Hopkins county, died of biliary calculi, aged forty years. He had been here ten years.

SAMPSON GOES CLEAR

(Special To Kentuckian)

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 9.—The special House Committee investigating charges against Judge Fred D. Sampson, Republican judge of 34th district, reported accusing Sampson of misconduct in many particulars but recommended no impeachment be had.

Mrs. Goodnight's Gift.

Lebanon, Tenn., Feb. 9.—Cumberland University is just in receipt of a gift from Mrs. I. H. Goodnight, of Franklin, Ky. The gift consists of a piece of real estate in Nashville valued at $5,000. Mrs. Goodnight's husband, the late Congressman I. H. Goodnight and son, the late Judge I. H. Goodnight, both of Franklin, Ky., were distinguished graduates of Cumberland University and always manifested much interest in the welfare of their alma mater, and their interest is perpetuated in the gift of the wife and mother.

Critically Ill.

Mr. Geo. V. Lacy was very low yesterday, at his home on Brown street. He is suffering from hardening of the arteries, complicated with heart trouble and enlargement of the liver. His condition is hopeless. He is 72 years old.

The Henderson-Brown College at Arkadelphia, Ark., a Methodist school, was burned last week. Loss $80,000, Insurance $50,000.

F. G. PETRE IS $15,000 AHEAD

Back From Charleston Where 10 to 1 Shot Made Him Rich.

F. G. Petre, the tailor, who made a killing on Elfall at Charleston Friday, has returned home. He does not know yet the exact amount of his winning, but the amount is supposed to be not less than $15,000. Peter Postell who had money on the same horse, won between $6,000 and $7,000, as stated in the last issue.

SEVENTEEN SUITS

Due To Be Filed Against Those Who Are Resisting Street Warrants.

About $2500 is due from 17 property owners on street apportionments in connection with the construction of the Bitulithic streets in the fall of 1912. The city advanced the money to the contractors and the Council of last year failed to order suits brought under the apportionment law. Unless these suits are brought within a few days, the property owners will not be brought into court in February. As they refused to pay the first installment last July, the entire cost with interest is due and is a lien on the property. Some of the wealthiest property owners in the city are in the list. About 75 per cent of the warrants were paid without protest.

TOO MUCH LIGHT.

Mazda Globes Get A Negro Janitor Into Jail.

Calvin Neely, col., who offered some mazda light globes for sale Sunday was reported to the police and taken in by them on suspicion. He was employed as furnace man at St. Charles Court and when his room was searched a big find was made. There were 65 electric light globes, 2 machine lubricators, 31 lamp chimneys, 8 mattresses, 16 boxes of mustard, some patent medicine, two pairs ladies' shoes, gloves, etc. The electric light globes were of a kind handled by T. J. Baugh, who had a shipment to fail to reach him on Jan. 14. The L. & N. car in which it should have come had no seal when it reached the station. Neely is held on a warrant charging him with breaking into a railroad car, which is a felony. The police have not found owners for the other articles.

Hail-Fugate.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion L. Fugate, of Adairville, Ky., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Mary Lucy, to Mr. Egbert O. Hail, of Russellville, Ky. The wedding will be solemnized the early part of April at the bride's home. Of wide-spread interest will be the announcement of the engagement of this popular couple. Miss Fugate is a beautiful girl, who on several occasions has been a visitor in Hopkinsville. At these times she won many friends and admirers through her many charms. Mr. Hail until recently made Nashville his home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eustice Hail. He formerly lived at Pembroke, where his father was a banker.

Frank Robinson Arrested.

Frank T. Robinson, proprietor of a pool room on Virginia street, was arrested and held over Saturday on a charge of permitting a boy of 13 years of age to play pool. Robinson says the boy produced a permit, but the parents of the boy deny that the permit was given by them and the police assert that it was written by another boy. The penalty is a fine and forfeiture of pool license. Robinson has been in business several years and this is the first complaint against his pool room.

MORE BOGUS CHECKS OUT

Six Business Houses Visited And Victimized Saturday Night.

SIX CHECKS FOR $9.85

Bennie Jones, a Negro, Passed Them All And Is At Large.

Six forged checks, one bearing the name of B. G. Underwood and the other five the name of Fred Jackson, were passed on unsuspecting business men Saturday night. The checks were all for $9.85 and were made payable to Bennie Jones.

One of them was passed on H. Bohn, a Sixth street dry goods man. This was one of the Jackson checks and had "Jackson Coal Co." printed on it in several places with a rubber stamp. Jones bought $2.50 worth of goods and Mr. Bohn gave him $7.35 in change. The negro had bought 35 cents worth of goods from John Young and presented the check, but Mr. G. W. Carliss, the salesman, refused to take it.

Another check was passed on McCord Bros., West Seventh street, grocers. The negro bought one or two dollars worth of groceries and pocketed the change coming to him. Nearby he threw the goods into a barrel.

Jones also visited O. G. Barrow's grocery and bought a few things and presented the check with G. B. Underwood's name. He got his change and left. This check had "Underwood Coal Co." stamped on it twice with a rubber stamp.

Three more checks for $9.85 on the Planters Bank & Trust Co., payable to Bennie Jones and Fred Jackson's name forged to them were passed on Morris's grocery, Athol Bartley at L. A. Johnson's and on young Reese, a salesman at the Black Hardware Co's. The same method was pursued in these cases.

"Jones" was a heavy set young negro about 23 years old, black or dark brown, and wore a black cap and blue overalls.

Mr. Bohn's description of the negro corresponds with that of the negro who passed a number of bogus checks bearing the signature of R. E. Cooper two weeks ago.

"Jones" has not been arrested.

FAIR DIRECTORS

Chosen and Officers Were Elected Yesterday.

The meeting of the stockholders of the Pennyroyal Fair Co. was most enthusiastic, as evidenced when a call for $2,700 was made and the subscriptions were called faster than the Secretary could take them down. Everything is fixed for a greater fair than last year.

There were two changes made in the directory: Alex Wallace, of Trigg, and Norton Garth, of Todd, were elected.

The directors then re-elected S. L. Cowherd, President; B. G. Nelson, Secretary; Dr. T. W. Blakey, Treasurer. M. C. Forbes was elected Vice President.

Last One Got Her.

Miss Isabelle Wright, a Nashville society girl, daughter of Chas. O. Wright, met L. A. Mitchell, of Jacksonville, Fla., in Atlanta Saturday and married him, jilting a Nashville fiance to whom she was to be married, the next day. She broke off an engagement with another Nashville man last fall. She met Mr. Mitchell only one week before they were married while returning from a winter in Florida.

Forest Notes.

The leg'satures of Virginia and South Carolina are considering advanced forestry legislation.

Incense cedar is proving valuable for piling on the Pacific coast where marine borers are particularly troublesome.

The paper used by the government printing office each year requires approximately 125 million pounds of rag pulp and 490 million pounds of wood pulp.

F. A. Elliott, state forester of Oregon, says that cooperative fire patrol associations among lumbermen for prevention of forest fires have proved their worth.

Of 606 fires last year on the national forests of Arizona, New Mexico, and Oklahoma, more than one-half were caused by lighting.
Campers set about one-tenth, and railroads one-twentieth.

Roadside signs, each containing a single catchy sentence in large type,
are proving effective in warning against fires on western forests. They give the essentials and tell the importance of protection against forest fires.

CAN WE HOPE FOR A SPECIFIC FOR TUBERCULOSIS?

In the Kentucky Medical Journal for June, 1913, there appears an article which discusses the above question, with special references to the claims of "Friedmann" and his boasted serum. The article by Dr.
Jacob Glahn, of Owensboro, Ky., and is worthy of thoughtful attention.

Dr. Glahn believes that the disease we call tuberculosis is really a condition of the system that invites the growth of a peculiar parasite called bacillus tuberculosis. His paper seems to teach that the production of an antitoxin curative of this condition is impossible, as the disease is not self-limiting. Whenever the condition of the system,
that is, of the cell-life is normal,
there is no soil in which the tubercle bacillus can grow or exist, and it disappears; but there is no antitoxin in the process. Hence the principles that apply in treating diphtheria and typhoid have no application in the treatment of tuberculosis. The presence of the tubercle bacillus in the system does not provide the secretion of an antitoxin, as is the case in the two other diseases mentioned, consequently no serum can be hoped for which will be a specific for tuberculosis, and the Friedmann treatment can not be curative. Only a restoration of the system to a condition of perfect nutrition can avail.

Then, indeed, the bacillus, finding no proper soil, must die.

The position assumed by Dr.
Glahn is logical. In only self-limiting disease, that we find satisfactory
"specific" serums, and tuberculosis has never been credited of self-limitation.—Southern Medical Journal.

Virtue of Publicity.

Publicity is still a sterling good thing and the newspapers give it most promptly and effectively. Because of this the newspapers are a great and useful public institution.
The grafter knows that as soon as the papers get a line on his work it will end. The investigations of real merit that are on at Frankfort will have a most salutary effect, but chiefly because of the wide publicity given them through the newspapers.
If unpublished in the papers the revelations would not strike terror to the offenders as now they do. There are piles of volumes of the published investigation in many a garret over the state that are keeping their own company in silence, while the newspaper reports have been read and remembered, and they have also been productive of further bettering legislation along several lines, and have awakened the country to a full realization of the dangers it was in.

Once there were governmental tendencies toward curbing the liberty of the press. This was in the days of John Adams' seditious laws, but the people arose in their might and swept the odious laws from the statute books. In the modern day when journalism is almost wholly impersonal, liberty of the press should be cherished.—Owensboro Messenger.

MUNICIPAL PLANT

May Furnish Light for the Town of Princeton.

Princeton, Ky., Feb. 6.—In a special message to the City Council Mayor R. W. Lisanby has set on foot a movement looking to the erection of an electric light plant to be owned and operated by the city. Ever since electric lights have been in use here they have been furnished by the Princeton Electric Light and Power Company, which is owned and operated by private individuals.

Mayor Lisanby gave some figures which were perhaps startling to most of the city's taxpayers, in that they showed that a little more than one-half of the revenue derived from the taxable property of the city is paid to the Electric Light Company.
The Mayor maintained that this should not be, and that a municipally-owned plant could be operated at a much less expense.

The Council also has under consideration a method whereby the sewerage system of the town will be changed so that it will not empty into an underground cavern through which a stream flows and empties

A MOTHER'S GRATITUDE

Many a Mother in Hopkinsville Will Appreciate the Following

Many a strong man and many a healthy woman has much for which to thank mother. The care taken during their childhood brought them past the danger point and made them healthy men and women. Thousands of children are bothered with incontinence of urine, and inability to retain it is of times called a habit. It is not always the children's fault—in many cases the difficulty lies with the kidneys, and can be readily righted. A Hopkinsville mother tells how she went about it.

Mrs. O. A. McEroy, 226 O'Neal avenue, Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "I gave my young son part of a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I know they did him a lot of good. He used to have trouble from weak kidneys every night. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills was all that was needed to strengthen his kidneys. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a fine remedy for kidney trouble and can highly recommend them."

SABLE NOW SCARCE

Petropavlovsk, Siberia, Is the Center of Industry.

Russian Government Has Forbidden Killing of More Animals Until 1916

—Women Can Save Money by Purchasing in U. S.

Henry C. Hibbard of Seattle, whose firm operates a trading steamer to the coast of Siberia and buys furs there and in Alaska, says that sables have been difficult to get this season owing to the fact that the Russian government has forbidden the killing of more animals until 1916.

"Our boat goes from Seattle to Unalakleet and thence to Petropavlovsk, and then up the coast to Anadir, around to Kolushin bay and thence back to Nomo," said Mr. Hibbard. "She takes $100,000 worth of merchandise, and between $35,000 and $40,000 in Russian money for the purposes of trading and bartering for furs, whalebone and ivory. This year she made a specialty of sables, and if the boat had been more liberally supplied with money we could have got a great deal more, in spite of the scarcity of the supply."

"Petropavlovsk is the center of the sable industry in Siberia, traders and hunters bringing their skins there to sell or exchange. The London market is usually a great deal better for undressed skins than any in this country, and Leipzig is good also. The selling markets that are the best are Paris, Vienna and St. Petersburg. Yet if women knew it who buy their furs over there they might be able to do a great deal better in this country."

"I know of a New York woman who purchased a sable coat in Paris that cost her $15,000, and presumably she had to pay 35 per cent. duty to get it into this country. Her sister, who lives in Seattle, wanted to get a similar coat and she asked me what I thought it would cost. I told her I could save her at least 50 per cent. She gave me the order, and there was made up for her in this country a coat that cost a little under $7,000 and which was a far better garment than the one her sister had paid $15,000 for in Paris."

"Of course, Americans are big buyers of furs. But the fur game is funny. We have brought furs from Seattle to New York and offered them to all the big dealers, who have absolutely refused to buy. Then we would ship them to the London sales, and in many cases American buyers would purchase our furs and bring them back here, though if they bought them dressed they had to pay duty on them."

"Silver foxes are rather scarce this year, especially choice skins. I sold two skins the other day for $1,000 apiece which the retail customer will probably pay $2,000 apiece for when they are made up."

"After our boat gets back from Nomo she makes a trip to Herschel island, at the mouth of the Mackenzie river. On her last trip she took a big cargo for the Stefansson party. She is the only craft that makes a regular annual trip up there, her main purpose being whaling. This time she is carrying a moving picture camera with 15,000 feet of film and is looking for bowhead whale, which is of considerable value because of the whalebone it yields. As against the $700 value of the sperm whale, the bowhead is worth $3,000, though its value has dwindled tremendously because women nowadays wear so little whalebone in their corsets. Formerly a bowhead was worth $20,000. Last year in four months we caught 11, a phenomenal number."

"The ice up there is closing in already. We had nows a while back that all the boats were frozen in and would not get back this winter, but I think ours will return. She carries a crew of 45 men and was built for hucking ice."

"Business conditions in Seattle are excellent. Every thing is going ahead fine. The big gold strike at Shushana, Alaska, has drawn lots of people through Seattle of late."

"By the way, owing to the government restrictions against the killing of polar bears, those skins are getting scarcer. We had 150 come in not long ago, which I imagine is about half the world's supply of the skins this year. They have to come from the Siberian side."

"Sealskins are showing a marked decline. They are going out of style and muskrat is taking their place. I could get real sealskin a lot easier than muskrat."

Prejudice to Be Overcome.

Prejudice against certain articles of food is not uncommon in this part of the world. The history of the garden tomato is evidence of this. Grandmothers today can remember the time when the tomato was the "Indian love apple" and nothing more. Perhaps the day is coming when we shall eat with relish fruits and articles of food which we now disregard or perhaps regard with fear. Luther Burbank and the other great horticulturists made aristocrats out of plebeian plants. Burbank made the cactus bear as a fruit tree.

Use Collapsible Plow.

In the open yellow pine forests of Washington and Oregon a collapsible plow is being used in digging fire lines to stop surface fires. The plow can be dismantled and folded into a compact form, so that it can be packed on horseback, and weighs only 40 pounds. When in use, one man with a horse can do the work of 20 or more men working with axes.

MOUNTAIN EPISODE

Another Case of "Good Luck to the Fellow With Nerve."

By ERNEST MCGAFFEY.

Faraday looked out from his little cabin on the hillside and saw the sun rising over the foothills and bathed in a mellow glow the scrubby pines and bleak outlines of the Colorado canyon. Rocks, timber and loneliness had been his portion for two years, and he was beginning to feel restive. He had taken the chance of coming west as a relief from the grudge of office work in New York, and now, after two years with the Midas Gold Mining company, he had begun to sigh for Broadway and the "skyscrapers" again, the whirl of life in the streets, the sight of laughing faces and well-dressed men and women, the dash and go of the great city of his boyhood.

He wondered what Margaret Floyd was thinking of that bright September morning. He had been a mere clerk in the New York house, but his irreproachable ancestry, founded on the exploits of a thriving fur trader and trapper, had given him entrée even into the charmed circle where the Floyd's moved, and he had danced and flirted and sighed with many a damsel whose furthest thought was beyond and above the idea of taking seriously any attentions of "Bud" Faraday, as his intimates called him. But as he was young, good-looking, something of a musician, and gifted with an abundance of that quality known as "nerve," he made his way well wherever he went. Ambitious enough to know that vegetating in a downtown office was a slow mode of preferment, he had eagerly accepted the opportunity of striking out for the mountains and "roughing it," with the high thoughts of youth to build for him the Aladdin's visions of hope.

He had gone without a word to Miss Floyd, and without even a note to tell her of his destination. He would "stand pat," he said to himself, and not bore anyone about his new venture. Sympathy he did not want, but only a chance to rise.

And this morning, with the magnificent towering vastness of the Rockies piercing the clouds, with the rare air of that great elevation filling his lungs, he had for a moment rather yearned for what was not to be, for the old languid life of the streets and drawing rooms. But the mood passed as quickly as it had come, and Faraday stretched his athletic figure and hurried his preparations for breakfast.

The Midas Mining company operated the gold field by means of water. Hydraulic mining was the technical term. Huge hoses which sent out a stream of water with terrific force washed down the gold-bearing side-hills into sluices, where the gold separated from the earth and rocks by reason of its specific gravity, and was caught in riffles or partial obstructions placed in the sluices. The power of one of these engines of liquid might was simply tremendous. After the timber had been cut away and removed from a slope or hillside the great tubes would be turned on to the earth and rocks, and mountains would melt away like snow before the sun.

The "Giants" was the name the miners had for the two most formidable streams. These would sluice away the hillside like a woman cutting bread, and roar like the thunder which belled out and down the path of such a volume of water. At 20 feet away it would cut a man in two like a piece of cheese. At 100 feet distance it would crush him into a jelly. At 200 feet it would toss him against the ground, bruised and unconscious done to death most likely, and if escaping death, favored almost as by a miracle. The entire outfit of the Midas Gold Mining company had a most wholesome respect for the "Giants."

A shout from "Big Harry" greeted Faraday as he emerged from the cabin and started for the office.

"When are the bosses coming?" was his cry.

"What bosses?" queried Faraday.

"Why, the eastern bunch," was "Big Harry's" response.

"I hadn't heard of anything," said Faraday.

"Well," said Harry, "the foreman's got a letter for you." At the office the letter was handed Faraday, and, opening it, he learned that H. B. Floyd, the president of the company, and some of the other officers of the company were coming to Colorado at once to look over the mine. He was glad of it, as the mine was prospering, and his own work was well ahead in every respect. He had superintended the cutting of large quantities of timber for new sluices, and cleared away much land for new sluicing, had worked early and late, and was prepared to show a good balance sheet. It was like old Floyd to get up and chase out at a minute's notice.

The next day the party arrived, and to Faraday's intense astonishment Margaret Floyd was one of them. She always had ruled her father with a waken rein, and her request to come west had been granted without a moment's hesitation on his part. She was a winsome-looking woman as she stepped from the officer's car, and gazed even handsomer than in the old days. The following morning the entire party started for the mine, and to Faraday's delight Margaret was placed in his charge as assistant superintendent of the mine, and the superintendent, large in authority and importance, conducted the mine owners to the place where active operations were in progress. The "Giants" were mowing down the hillside as easily as a harvesting machine lays low the ripened wheat of a July field. The men in charge of them worked methodically and with the utmost care. Above, an eagle turned in the sunlight and the snow-capped peaks of a distant range gleamed whitely in the morning light. Faraday and Miss Floyd had fallen behind the rest of the party, which was standing on a hillside above the "Giants," watching the tearing jets of water sent into the mountain side. They were looking down the gulch where she had called his attention to a clump of lone pines. Suddenly a shout directed his attention to the party above. He and the girl were 70 feet from the nearest man directing one of the "Giants." Faraday turned instantly, grasping the girl by the hand as he did so. They both looked up in the direction of the warning cry and saw a tragedy enacted, so swift, so sudden that the memory might not fade from their lives while life lasted. A "Giant," with the fierce volume of leaping water spurting from its nozzle, had gotten loose in some way and was turning with the tremendous force exerted by the water. The workman had attempted to control the gear which was used to direct it, and the immense power whirled and struck him to the earth, mangled beyond description, and killed instantly. Then the freed force, springing out like an arrow launched from the bow, had shot, breath-high, directly towards Faraday and the girl.

The whole thing had happened in a moment. The corpse of the miner hung aside, the sweep of the nozzle, the hiss of the flying stream, the shout of the party above, the menace of instant death.

Faraday's perceptions, sharpened by the ever-present danger of the mines, had half-sensed what the trouble was at the instant of the cry of warning.

As the huge nozzle swung around he caught the girl about the waist and threw himself to the ground, carrying the girl with him. The water was over them as they fell, like a hissing serpent, but they were safe. Miss Floyd was bruised, and Faraday had a long cut on his face, but in five minutes the miners had the "Giant" back under control and Faraday helped the girl to her feet.

The president of the Midas company was a man of few words. He first grasped Faraday by the hand with the grip of a grizzly and then caught his daughter to his breast.

That night Faraday made a resolution. The next day he carried it into effect. Afterward he sought an interview with President Floyd and stated the case very briefly. The president sustained his reputation for brevity. He said: "I brought her out here, but she would have gone back in the baggage car if it hadn't have been for you. I guess you've earned her, and as you say she is willing, I have no objections. But I want you on the board of directors from now on, so kindly pack up your things and be ready to go back with us Tuesday."

Faraday bowed and retired. And as "Big Harry" parenthetically remarked as the party set out for the little mountain station, "good luck to the fellow with nerve."

Lightning Superstitions. According to the ancients, no one could be struck by lightning while asleep and no tree struck by lightning could be burnt. Splinters from such a tree, diligently chewed, were an infallible cure for toothache and were, of course, pleasant to the taste than the dentists' forceps. And the old-time schoolboy firmly believed that if he were rash enough to mention lightning directly after a flash the important part of his raiment would be immediately torn off. And many were his attempts to land his fellows in that predicament.

Nothing for Him. "Yes," said Mr. Billings, "my wife had my fever as usual this year, and my daughter had brain fever from over-study and my son had insomnia."

"And wasn't there anything the matter with you?"

"No. There isn't any ailment that you can cure by going down town everyday and working on the books."

The Schemers. Jack—Say, old man, I'm in an awful fix. I proposed to a girl last night and she accepted me—a thing I didn't dream of. What shall I do?

Tom—Easy! Just propose again as if you'd forgotten. That ought to make her so angry she'll refuse you.

HOG CHOLERA

Is Getting In Its Work In The Smith Mills Section.

Henderson, Ky., Feb. 8.—During the past two weeks John Keelen and Peck Utley have lost about 35 hogs, valued at over $200. Their herd was one of the finest in that section until the disease became prevalent and now they have only a few left, several of them being sick.

Several months ago the disease gained a foothold in that section and farmers lost heavily before it was checked.

Farmers in the Smith Mills section are being hard hit by cholera among their swine. It is estimated that within the past three weeks more than one hundred hogs have died of the disease.

Roht. Trigg one of the largest swine raisers in that section, has lost about 50 head. All of his animals that have died have been burned in order to check the disease.

Fatal Explosion.

Urban, Ky., Feb. 6.—Frank Pennington and Robert Hayer, of this city, were instantly killed; Thomas Hayer, Daniel Cox and Robert Hampton were fatally burned, while John and Lincoln Hayer were seriously injured early today when a boiler in a sawmill exploded here.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

PLAIN TALK

From Two Prosperous Housewives, About Peruna.

Mrs. E. T. Gaddis, of Marion, North Carolina, writes to the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio: "Before I commenced to use Peruna I could not do any housework without suffering a great deal of pain. I took Peruna and now I can do anything with pleasure they have done for me more than any other medicine have ever taken. Now I am as well as ever. I do all my own work and it never hurts me at all. I think Peruna is a great medicine for womankind."

Mrs. Sarah Frye, No. 105 Sylvan Ave., Asbury Park, N. J., writes: "I have no words to express my gratitude for the wonderful cure that Peruna has done for me. It is a godsend to all suffering women. Peruna has done wonderful work for me."

"I was sick over half of my life with systemic catarrh. I want this letter published far and wide, as I was a great sufferer, but to-day I feel as well as anybody can feel."

"Nearly all my life I have spent nearly all I could rake and scrape for doctors, but none of them did me any good. But since I started on your Peruna one year ago I have not last found relief in your wonderful Peruna. I had begun to think that I was not going to get well, but thank God I am well to-day."

"I hope and pray you may live long to help others as you have helped me. Instead of being a walking drug store I am growing fat and doing well. I will never be without Peruna."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

A 70 Pound Gobbler.

An Anniston, Ala., man has a mammoth Bronze turkey with an interesting record. Here it is:

"The gobbler will be five years old in May and weighs around seventy pounds. He has had a lot of varied experiences and travels, and it's a wonder he has not been slaughtered ere this."

"C. E. Meeks bought him from Mrs. J. C. Schofer, of Mulberry, Tenn., for $15 when he was eight months old. Herbert Meeks bought him last December for $25 and sold him for $50. Mr. Small at Saks store was the winner and sold the old turk back to Herbert Meeks for $10, who resold him to the White Star Market for $13.50. The Market shipped him to Birmingham, where he was on exhibition for two weeks and then was shipped back to Gadsden. Chas. Echols was the next purchaser, paying $11, and he reshipped him to Birmingham, where he sold him for $25. Later Mr. Echols bought the gobbler back for $15 and shipped him to Gadsden where he brought $25. Will Huston being the winner."

"Mr. Huston traded the turkey to Abe Sake for $10, who sent it to his brother, Joe Sake, at Anniston, who is trying to get rid of him; this time the price is $50."

Dr. J. H. Rice, who was re-elected to the office of Coroner last November without opposition, resigned his office and Judge Walter Knight appointed him Secretary of the County Board of Health.

The office of Coroner is an unsalaried one, the law allowing the officer a fee of six dollars for each inquest.

REAL WINTER

Mercury Dropped From 54 To 12 Degrees.

The mercury dropped from 54 degrees Saturday to 12 above the zero mark. Sunday morning the temperature was about the same, but the cold wind from the west was not so strong. During Sunday there was but little wind and the temperature was more endurable, with milder weather yesterday. Friday and Saturday night some water pipes were frozen. Ice formed on ponds but not thick enough to put up. One good thing done by the cold weather was to give the fruit trees a better chance of bearing.

WUN AND SUN JOY

Being a Story of Love Staged in the Far Away Orient.

By WILLIAM H. OSBORNE.

The world is small, and the years go by. Time flies like the old invisible she dragon who visits the temple every hundred years. It is not so long ago that little Wun Lung and his neighbor, Fow Kee, sat at the feet of the smaller Sun Joy in the Street of the Six Hundred Full Blown Roses. Wun Lung and Fow Kee were men—or thought they were. Sun Joy was a woman. Their combined length did not exceed nine feet. Sun Joy was demure and coy and winsome. Wun Lung was lively and good natured. Fow Kee was burly and jealous and ill natured. He and Wun Lung kow-towed, as it were, at the shrine of Sun Joy—and at that shrine, so it would seem, Wun Lung had the inside track. And for that Fow Kee would pull Wun Lung's short, soft pig tail—and Wun Lung would simply laugh.

But Wun Lung had something beside his good nature to recommend him—and that something made him much admired by little Sun Joy and much envied by Fow Kee. For Wun Lung, although he never realized it for many years, was a natural horn acrobat. Many believe that feet were made to walk upon. With Wun Lung it was an even toss up as to hands, head or feet. He could wriggle like a snake in the grass. He could tie himself into a knot like a skein of silk. And he didn't keep all this to himself. For the first great event in the lives of Fow Kee and Sun Joy happened on the day when, under the admirable tuition of Wun Lung, they each were able to walk from end to end of the bamboo pole in the market place—the pole where the richsbaws are all lined up. And when they had learned they did the trick, not once but 20 times a day.

Wun Lung and Fow Kee, still bowing low at the shrine of Sun Joy, grew up into young men—Sun Joy grew into a young woman.

And one day something happened. Fow Kee was in trouble. Over what no one knew. He had looked upon the glowing opium too often—he had lived too hard. He had disregarded that commandment which to us is the eighth, being also the three thousand and first injunction of Confucius. In other words, he disregarded the law of private property, and one night he silently stole away. And that left Wun Lung only to kowtow before Sun Joy. But one day he too went—went in the daytime, with the good will of his neighbors in the Street of the Six Hundred Roses. He went to make his fortune in the new land favored of all lands. But he went, as he said, but to return.

In a little side street in San Francisco Wun Lung set up the inevitable laundry. And as he washed and ironed he thought of little Sun Joy and his spirits rose and he sang in his mild, quavering oriental voice, the songs of his home land. And many came to look upon him, for he had one interesting peculiarity which others of his race did not have. For if Wun Lung was on one side of his ironing board and desired to reach the other side, he merely vaulted high in the air—and there he was. He made quick little side steps over to the stove, and he whirled round and round on the ball of one foot, like a top. And he laughed as he did it.

One day a scowling, skulking Chinaman, attracted by the crowd, stuck his head inside and uttered a guttural exclamation. Wun Lung responded with a smile and a kind word. His visitor was Fow Kee. Fow Kee came in. He explained that he was rich and prosperous. He did not explain why his clothes were slightly ragged, but he did suggest that if Wun Lung could put up twenty-five American dollars he could make Wun Lung a rich man. Wun Lung put them up and waited to become rich. Fow Kee disappeared. Time flew. Wun Lung moved to Chicago. The crowd there admired him also. He explained that his name, Wun Lung, really meant Agile Gibbon. It was in Chicago that he again met Fow Kee. This time Fow Kee looked prosperous, but he still scowled. If Wun Lung had not become rich on that twenty-five it was apparent that Fow Kee had. Fow Kee watched some of Wun Lung's antics about the laundry with considerable interest. In the gathering dusk he whispered in Wun Lung's ear. Wun Lung grew wide-eyed in surprise. The next day Wun Lung shut up shop.

In the Imperial theater in the metropolis, the headlines were the Kee-Lung troupe—the Chinese (not Japanese mind, but Chinese) grotesque acrobats. They had been running for four weeks and were still popular. The troupe consisted only of Wun Lung and Fow Kee. The stage was rigged up like a Chinese laundry and what they did was done there—even to the mild quavering songs of the inimitable Wun Lung. When they had first started, Fow Kee, whose evil mind strayed back to the Street of the Roses, again whispered in the ear of Wun Lung. Again Wun Lung acquiesced—and he had done more. He had placed in the hands of one of the Chinese tongs a substantial sum of money for the transportation of the beautiful Sun Joy to America. He knew that the tong would get her here or there. And all day long he sang of the Sun Joy and bided his time. And so also did Fow Kee.

Sun Joy came. Fow Kee, who had inside knowledge of the troupe, the representative of the tong. He whispered in her ear that it was he who had sent the money to bring her over. She asked about Wun Lung. Fow Kee smiled and said that Wun Lung was happy—Wun Lung and his Irish-American wives. And he scowled and smiled as Sun Joy uttered a low voiced exclamation of despair.

At last Wun Lung and Sun Joy met, with enthusiasm on one side and much reserve on the other. Fow Kee hung around for a time, but finally was compelled to leave them alone. And then Sun Joy burst forth and told Wun Lung about his Irish-American wives. Wun Lung smiled. The wives belonged to Fow Kee, not to himself. And so he told Sun Joy. And she believed him and was glad.

And Sun Joy joined the troupe—and she was a strong drawing card. The Kee-Lung-Joy Chinese Acrobats held their place at the top of the program. And Sun Joy learned. She had not forgotten the bamboo rod in the market place. But she clung to Wun Lung and rebuffed Fow Kee. She was a queen in her way, was Sun Joy, and Fow Kee was afraid of her. But he thought if Wun Lung was out of the way it would be a good thing—a very good thing. But the troupe made money. Fow Kee got the most of it, but Wun Lung and Sun Joy had plenty, too.

High up in the laundry on the stage was a tight wire which was supposed to be an indoor clothes line. The wire was not ten feet—it was 25 feet above the hard boards of the stage. All three of the troupe danced upon this wire. Fow Kee was not altogether graceful and he generally was afraid, and the other two had most of the applause. Wun Lung especially made a bit.

One night before the curtain rose, Fow Kee with his own hands moved the real iron stove over to a point directly under the wire. A man falling from above upon the stove might be crushed to death.

It was at the very climax of the act. The three were upon the wire. Suddenly, by an almost imperceptible movement, Fow Kee jerked his elbow into Wun Lung's side. Wun Lung braved himself, grasped at the air, tottered and fell. He was a little fellow and he did not weigh overmuch. Fow Kee smiled and scowled. But little Sun Joy darted forward and caught Wun Lung as he fell. This, too, destroyed her balance, but with her other hand she clung to the wire. And there they hung, in mid-air. Fow Kee now grasped the situation. He did not want her harmed, and he saw she would cling to the last gasp. And anyway if they did fall now it was likely that they would light on their feet. He therefore waved his hand lightly to the audience and stooping down, by main force lifted Sun Joy and Wun Lung back to the wire. The audience, who thought it was a new trick, laughed and applauded. But Sun Joy, who had seen it all, did not laugh. Nor did she laugh later when she saw Fow Kee shake a bit of white powder into Wun Lung's tea.

But she did laugh the next day when she and Wun Lung, in a luxurious palace car, sped west from danger into safety, sped on their hasty wedding trip back to the beautiful street of the Six Hundred Full Blown Roses. Back to the Imperial theater a scowling Chinaman was trying to do the Kee-Lung-Joy act all by himself. He didn't do it well and the crowd knew it. "Bring on the little Chink and the little girl," they yelled. (Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Inadequate.

Strickland Gillilan, the lecturer and the man who vaulted into fame by his "Off Ag'in on Ag'in, Finnigan," verses, was about to deliver a lecture in a small Missouri town. He asked the chairman of the committee whether he might have a small pitcher of ice water on the platform table.

"To drink?" queried the committee-man.

"No," answered Gillilan, "I do a high-diving act."—Everybody's Magazine.

How He Knew.

The president of the Anti-Nicotine league approached the stranger who was puffing on a pipe.

"My dear sir," began the president, "do you know that tobacco makes a man unhealthy, idiotic, short-winded and paralytic?"

"How do you know?" demanded the smoker.

"How do I know?" said the president. "Why, I was an inveterate smoker for ten years."

One Exception.

"It makes me sick to hear the silly things men are saying to that homely old girl over there!"

"Mercy! don't you know who that is? That's Elvora Squeers, the great belle! Five millions in her own name!"

"Oh, is that it? Now I remember that I saw her picture in the paper the other day."

"Yes, everything flatters her except her pictures."

Good System.

"Old man, you always look bright and cheerful."

"Think so?"

"You certainly always look cheerful. Have you no troubles?"

"Yes; I have troubles, but I never sympathize with myself."

He Did It.

"Why do you do me?" she demanded. "I am a question."

Weak, Cold Spells.

Wilmington, N. C.—Mrs. Cora L.
Ritter, of this place, says: "I used to have headaches and blind dizzy spells, and weak cold spells went all over me. I had different doctors, but they were unable to tell me what was wrong, so I began to take Cardiul. I am now all right, in good health, and better than I have been for 10 years." Cardul is a remedy for women, which has been helping sick women for nearly a life time.
You can absolutely rely upon it.
Other people have done the testing and you should profit by their experience. Cardul has benefited a million women. Why not you? Begin taking Cardul today.

A Winter Cough.

A stubborn, annoying, depressing
cough hangs on, racks the body, weakens the lungs, and often leads to serious results. The first dose of Dr. King's New Discovery gives relief. Henry D. Sanders, of Cavendish, Vt., was threatened with consumption, after having pneumonia. He writes: "Dr King's New Discovery ought to be in every family;
it is certainly the best of all medicines for coughs, colds or lung trouble." Good for children's coughs.
Money back if not satisfied. Price 50c, and $1.00. At all Druggists.

AEROPLANES GROW IN SIZE

Built Now to Carry Passengers, Despite the Pessimistic Warnings
of the Theorists.

Big aeroplanes are the striking development of this year in aeronautics—six-passenger, eight-passenger,
and even ten-passenger machines having made successful flights. Many theorists have recently declared that there are physical limits to the size of successful aeroplanes, and that these limits have nearly been reached; but on the practical side the development continues.

One Russian aviator has made long flights with a machine having a span of more than 100 feet. The latest model in Wright's machines, in contrast, has a span of only 38
feet; and the span of the high-speed French machines is much less. The Russian aeroplane carries ten passengers, all seated comfortably in an inclosed car. Four hundred horsepower is used to turn four propellers.
A tandem biplane recently tried out on the Seine in France, adapted to rise from the water, weighs more than three tons loaded, and is driven by three engines developing 400 horsepower. Two sets of wings have a span of 82 feet each. Machines are now being constructed to carry 12 and 14 passengers.—Saturday Evening Post.

To feel strong, have good appetite and digestion, sleep soundly and enjoy life, use Burdock Blood Bitters, the family system tonic. Price, $1.00

Watch for Valuable Paper.

Not a scrap of paper is permitted to be carried out in the United States treasury department until it has passed the censorship of the official examiners of the waste baskets. For years they have been doing this work, and have saved the government the amounts of their salaries many times over. Some time back one of them found in a waste-basket a $10,000
United States coupon bond.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

To Remove Paper.
A good way to remove old wall paper is to use the following solution:
A thick paste solution should be made by adding flour and a few ounces of acetic acid. This paste solution should be applied with a brush to the old wall paper in quantities. After a few minutes the old paper can be removed in great strips very easily and with very little dust or dirt.

To Cure a Cold in One Day Take LAXATIVE BROMO Quinine. It stops the Cough and Headache and works off the Cold.
Druggists refund money if it fails to cure.
E. W. GROVE'S signature on each box, 25c.

Touched Him in Tender Spot.
"It is estimated that not more than half the children born survive their fifth year." "That's terrible, and something should be done about it," replied the mill owner. "When these children get to be a couple of years older they'd be ready to go to work."
—Puck.

To Prevent Blood Poisoning
apply at once the wonderful old reliable DR.
PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL. A surgical dressing that relieves pain and heals at the same time. Not a Lintment. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

IS NO LONGER AN ORACLE

People Have Ceased to Look Upon the Dictionary as an Authority That Is Infallible.

The dictionary is ceasing, gradually, but surely, to be an oracle. Its position as such was never quite secure. Even when Samuel Johnson first essayed to set the standard of English usage he had to encounter both scoffers and Seotemen: the scoffers organized, the Seotemen triumphed. So that step by step, pushed forward by the omnivorous industry of German scholarship and lured onward by commercial competition, the dictionary, unlike the proverbial rolling stone, has gathered much moss by rolling—down hill.
To cite from the dictionary is now proof, not of the correctness of a word or idiom or pronunciation, but merely of its existence.

A century of encyclopedists has accomplished this. When Diderot began his work his aim was to sys-tematize knowledge parallel with a given philosophy of things; today
the encyclopedist takes, with Bacon,
"all knowledge for his province." The dictionary has followed closely behind. The gain, after all, is ours.
Standards are now set, and disputed,
in a separate place assigned to them;
the dictionary gives us the whole wealth of words from which to draw at will. It would seem that the principle of inclusiveness could scarcely be carried beyond the position reached today, unless to include the necessary popular formations that must continue as long as the language lives.

HIS SCHEME

First Actor—I wish I had some money.
Second Actor—What would you do—pay your board bill?
First Actor—No; so I'd have enough money to move.

GIVE LIVES TO GOOD CAUSE.

A school is located in a little building erected by the missionaries in an Eskimo settlement on one of the Aleutian islands. The nearest land is Siberia, over forty miles away. It is a bleak place. During the summer the temperature is seldom above fifty degrees, and more often around thirty. A few wild flowers appear in August, but most of the year the island is an icy waste.

Forbidding as the place is, the two teachers say that the eagerness for light on the part of the pupils makes up for the loneliness and privation.
Sometimes it is exceedingly difficult to keep warm in the little schoolhouse in midwinter and there are no luxuries.

FORGETFUL HUSBANDS.

Mr. Bacon—I see there was a heavy falling off in the number of postcards sent to this country from Berlin last year.

Mrs. Bacon—Evidently the husbands over there are just as careless as they are over here when it comes to dispatching their wives' mail.

JUST LIKE THEM.

Yeast—You say they live together
like cats and dogs.

Crimsonbeak—Yes; they seem to live on "scraps."

THEIR PLAN.

"Why did the suffragists go to Washington for their convention?"

"I guess they thought it would be a capital idea for congress."

NATURAL WAY.

"It certainly does cost a city a lot to keep the streets clean in winter."
"Of course it does; cold cash naturally goes into banks of snow."

ITS NAME.

"Pop, I want to know something."
"What is it, my son?"
"Is an aviary a place for the bird men?"
